Joe Franzese is a Tampa transplant from NYC who discovered his passion for photography after purchasing and flying a drone as a hobby. Flying over various locations, he would often get stopped by people passing by and get offered jobs to take pictures and video of all sorts of interesting subjects.

Seeing the need for aerial and digital photography, Joe borrowed a camera from one of his friends and business took off (pun intended). What started as a hobby transformed into a full-time career.

Joe received his degree at the City University of New York at Hunter College and formed his company before completing graduation.

Joe is most known for the unique perspectives he captures both from his drone and DSLR. He specializes in both aerial and digital photography and videography, applying his skills for event coverage, commercial and real estate clients.

“Every day I wake up with the opportunity to enjoy new experiences. One day I’m on the beach taking pictures and video for a music concert, the next I’m in a studio capturing the juicing process for a local juice company. It’s always something different and I enjoy it so much that it never really feels like work.”
